Hartford Courant (1764-1995*)

A front-row seat to the American Revolution

AMERICA'S LONGEST CONTINUOUSLY published newspaper, the Hartford Courant is literally older than the nation. It provides historians and other researchers a front-row seat from which to view the birth of an independent nation.

In the Courant's pages, today's researchers will find firsthand accounts of colonists' reaction to the Stamp Act, reports of the Boston Tea Party, and a copy of the Declaration of Independence. The newspaper's existence was so crucial to the rebels' cause during the American Revolution that when its paper mill burned, the Connecticut legislature authorized a lottery to build a new mill.

This publication also chronicles slavery in the United States, capturing the complexity of the debate by simultaneously publishing ads for the capture of fugitive slaves and writing in opposition of the Fugitive Slave Act. It became a staunch supporter of Abraham Lincoln's 1860. presidential campaign.

To study life in the U.S. from its very formation during the American Revolution, to its near collapse during the Civil War, and to its growth throughout the 20th century, start here, with ProQuest.
