

ProQuest Leftist Newspapers and Periodicals (1900-2010)

The latest in the ever-expanding collection of Historical Newspapers from ProQuest, Leftist Newspapers and Periodicals consists of English-language publications spanning the 20th century from 1900-2010. The collection covers Communist, Socialist and Marxist thought, theory and practice and is comprised of 140+ titles and over 200,000 digitized pages.

The recent rise and appeal of declared socialist Bernie Sanders and his progressive policies to young voters echoes and draws from past social and political movements. Furthermore, a renewed interest in organized labor and labor movements is emerging, powered by social media's voice over essential workers' growing concerns for their well-being and safety during Covid-19. These contemporary trends emphasize the importance and relevance of Leftist Newspapers and Periodicals for teaching, learning, and research today. Use this collection to explore historical voices pertaining to issues regarding workers' rights, organized labor, labor strikes, WWII Nazi atrocities, McCarthyism, Civil Rights, and modern-day class struggles, which have led to a renewed interest in alternative social organizations.

Researchers can study the progression of views, events, people, and places over time through these historical newspaper and periodical pages, including articles, photos, advertisements, classified ads, obituaries, editorial cartoons, and more.
